

Mokena Helps Relieve Local Depression By Starting Street Repair Work; Wage Scale 30c Hr.

A noteworthy street improvement program was inaugurated by the Mokena village board at their meeting Wednesday night when they decided to spend $2,000 for repairing streets in the village, the money to be raised from automobile license fees and the general tax money due from the county.

The board voted to stone First street from the Herman Schweser corner eastward to the old school house and connect with the gravel road in front of the Erickson farm. It was also voted to stone several short streets on the south side of village. One of the streets to be so improved runs by the J. H. Nordsall and J. C. Nielsen properties to the Wolf road. A total of 3200 feet of street is to be improved. These streets have been mud holes for years and have never had a shovel-ful of stone on them.

In addition to stoning these streets the village will also put in metal culvert pipes under driveways and will stone the driveways up to the sidewalk line. All this work is to be done under the supervision of the streets and alleys committee.

As the Rock Island railroad is a heavy taxpayer in this section and it was suggested that the stone be shipped in by freight and thus give the railroad a freight revenue.

Highway commissioner Emil D. Cappel is to do the grading work of preparing the roadbed for the stone, the streets to be made 12 feet wide and eight inches thick.

The cars are to be unloaded with a conveyor and the stone is to be hauled at the rate of 25 cents per yard by Fred Hentsch and Henry Yunker.

Employment will be available for five men or more. The village board set the wage scale at 30 cents per hour for an eight hour day. It was also voted to hire local men, married men preferred.

The proposed improvement will be started either the latter part of this week or next week, depending on the arrival of the stone.

The property owners are much pleased with the action of the board which also at the same time helps out on the local unemployment situation.

It is proposed to stone more of the village streets when funds are available.

Benefit Show Goes Over Big In Mokena

The benefit show "The Farmer and the Detective" presented in the Mokena school auditorium under the auspices of the Mokena Garden club by the Don C. Hall Company, professional entertainers, Tuesday night, was a big success in every way.

The play was masterfully presented and was very well liked. It made the audience laugh and also feel sober as the players brought out the various emotions of the characters portrayed. This play has been produced in many cities by the Hall Company and has always received a big hand.

Walter R. Hall of Milwaukee came especially to Mokena to take the part of Jason Joskins, an amusing old Connecticut Yankee, whose droll humor brought forth peals of laughter.

The various characters of the play were all portrayed by members of the Hall family.

Carlos Hall, and his sisters, Wanda and Alva did specialty features between the acts and received a big hand.

The Mokena Community band played several selections at the opening of the program.

The total proceeds came to $28.50 and were turned over to the Garden Club Relief fund.

The Don C. Hall Company are to be given much credit for their splendid entertainment.

Mokena Board Takes Up Fight For Cheaper Gas Rates

The Mokena village board favors the abolishment of the therm basis for measuring gas as now used by the Public Service Company and the return to the cubic foot system as was in use before the new gas was turned on.

At the Mokena council meeting on Wednesday a letter was read from the Illinois Municipal League of Urbana of which the Mokena board is a member, in which it was stated that the new gas is a "lazy" gas and that more gas must be burned to get the heat given by the manufactured. The letter further pointed out that by using the present therm basis the gas consumers are said to be paying a higher rate than if the cubic foot basis were used. The Mokena council passed a resolution appointing the Illinois Municipal League to represent this municipality before the Illinois Commerce Commission on the hearing favoring the cubic foot basis to base gas rates on.

Mokena Adopts New Dog License

A drive will be made to do away with the large number of stray dogs which have been over running the village. Dog owners will receive a notice from the village clerk within the next few days to apply for a dog license.

All money collected for dog licenses will be placed in the general village fund.

By Eileen Mohr

The regular meeting of the Niagara Girls Club was held at the home of Mrs. J. Swisher March 26, 1932. We made plans to entertain the mothers Saturday before Mother's day May 7th at the home of Mrs. Buchanan and we discussed the bunco which is to be held later. We made Easter rabbits and wrote an Easter wish to our mothers on them. And we sent an Easter wish to Mrs. Scheer. And the Easter rabbit left an Easter egg for each one of the girls.

To Hold Cold Cooking Demonstration at Orland Park

Shipments of Kelvinator Corporation refrigeration units for the first two months of this year were more than 18 per cent, above the same period of 1931, it was announced by H. W. Burritt, Vice President.

Withholding of new models until after the first of the calendar year resulted in a greater loss for the quarter ending January 1 but the increase in sales since the introduction of the new line indicates that the new move was entirely justified, according to Mr. Burritt.

Mr. Roy Loebe, the Orland Park Kelvinator dealer, is planning to hold a Cold Cooking demonstration. Watch for the date.

TINLEY FIREMEN ENJOY RITZY PROGRAM

The members of the fire departments of the villages of southern Cook County met at Robbins Monday night. About 250 members were present. The Tinley Park fire department was well represented. After the business meeting an entertainment program was put on which was quite ritzy. Report has it that Wm. Funk, E. E. Rice and George Hartman of the Tinley Park crew had front seats. Wonder why. Also we are told one of the Tinley Park delegation had to stand up to see what was going on due to a tall man obscuring his view.

TINLEY PARK TRIANGLE TATTLE

Hello, peoples.

Dorothy Goebel and Stanley Mager were home over Easter. They had a brief vacation from the college "grind", and seemed to be glad to be back with their old "cronies". It was swell to see you too.

Ye members please note that there is a meeting on Monday night April 4.

The club's basketball teams will play the last games of the season on Tuesday night. It will be for the benefit of the newly organized baseball club. They'll appreciate your attendance.

Mildred Nielsen had a party in honor of her (how many, Millie?) birthday on Monday. Minnie (yes, the Moocher) didn't know when to stop eating and later suffered with pains in her mid-section commonly termed stomach ache.

The basketball tournament finals will be played on Sunday, April 3 at 2:30. We hope our team will be in there battling for the championship on said afternoon.

"Minnie" had the habit of going to a popular dance pavilion, in this vicinity, most every Saturday night. She was very popular but couldn't resist asking certain fellows for a dance. One of the fellows noticed that she did this quite often and termed it "mooching". And so folks, Minnie the Moocher.

"Between You and Me" is none other than Mick, the popular fellow that dogs are named after, Harold L. the "dizzy blonde" who had so many proposals of marriage because he claims he can cook and "Vollare" the butcher boy. May we suggest that you name your column "Bright Sayings by Little Children". (Ketch On.)

Tinley Ladies Chorus

MUSICAL NOTES
The pulse-beat of Tinley Park's musical and dramatic activities is centered for the time being, around the fascinatingly beautiful operetta "TULIP TIME", which will be presented some time in the very near future, by the Ladies Chorus. The operetta is humorous, mysterious, and full of exciting situations. With the intriguing theme, lilting music, and quaint dancing, this will, without a doubt be an out-standing event from every angle. A great deal of attention and fore-thought has been given to the costumes. All musical parts are under the personal supervision of Mr. Alexander Co.ado; Mrs. Corado, accompanist; Trudie Swisher, dramatic coach; Mrs. Florence Anderson, and Mr. Clarence Sanders will take full charge of the stage setting, which by the way will be entirely different from any used on previous occasions. You just can't afford to miss seeing "TULIP TIME". Watch this paper next week for the exact time and place for this big event. Part of the proceeds will be given to the school.

Route of S. W. Highway Thru Orland Park Set By Village Board

The matter of definitely setting the location of the right of way of the Southwest Highway thru Orland Park, was the chief matter under discussion at the Orland Park village Board Monday night.

Major George Quinlan, Cook county Supt. of highways, his assistants, and Robert Kingery of the Chicago Regional Planning Commission and Mrs. Fleming, representing the Cook County Board of Commissioners and representatives of the State Highway Department were present. Maps showing several routes for the Southwest Highway thru Orland were considered and finally it was decided to choose an entirely different location from any shown on the map.

It was voted to have the Southwest highway right-of-way start from the grade separation bridge to the northeast of Orland and go in westerly direction on 142nd street thru the forest preserve and run back of the Orland Park school site and then turn southward on Greenland avenue to the southwest edge of the Orland Park village limits. The new right-of-way location met with the unanimous consent of the Orland Park Board as well as the consent of the county and state officials.

Major Quinlan advised that it is his wish to start work on the right-of-way grade at an early date. A number of hills must be made so he is anxious to have the work start at once so the hills will have time to settle or fall, at which time the paving work would be done.

With the completion of the paving thru Orland Park, the matter of continuing the Southwest Highway thru Cook County parallel the Washburn right-of-way to Alpine to junction with the Wolf Road and the Will County extension of the Southwest Highway will be up to the Cook County Board, and when this is done the Southwest Highway will be completed in Cook County and the matter of carrying on this road from Marley southward to Saukemin will await the action of the Illinois Legislature next January at which time the roads recommended by the secondary roads program committee will be acted on.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson, Secretary of the Illinois Press Association, Mokena

According to H. P. Etler, weather observer at the University of Illinois, the cold wave, which struck Illinois the second week in March, is the longest one recorded since the establishment of the observatory 42 years ago. W. L. Burlison, head of the University of Illinois agronomy department, has expressed fear for the winter wheat crop during the cold wave. He says that alfalfa and clover are also in danger.

The state department of agriculture announced that Sangamon and Johnson counties have become accredited as free from bovine tuberculosis, and Vermilion and Morgan counties have been re-accredited. Federal and state officials have verified the tests completed in February and these tests have brought the list of accredited areas in Illinois up to 81 counties. Johnson county showed the lowest percentage of infection found thus far in Illinois, when only six cows reacted out of 12,106 tested.

According to Phil S. Haner, superintendent of the division of plant industry in the state department of agriculture, the farmers of Illinois are becoming more "pure-seed minded." He says that the volume of seed samples tested in Springfield has increased 100 per cent in three years.

The department of purchases and construction has announced that a contract has been let for the furnishing and installing of equipment for manufacturing automobile license plates at the Joliet state prison. The contract price, installed, is $58,542 and the plant must be installed by June 15 and ready to operate at capacity by the first of July. Fully 70 per cent of this equipment will be made by Illinois workmen.

To each of its members throughout the state, the Illinois chamber of commerce has sent out appeals for co-operation in the state-wide drive against unemployment and hoarding of money. The state chamber intends to make surveys of residences and firms and secure pledges from everyone to do repairs or work which they have been deferring until some further time. The organization asks the co-operation of everyone in this great work which has been undertaken.

The tremendous increase in state business of the past few years has crowded out of office vaults all but the most frequently used records. In many states, such records are very difficult to locate. Such a condition does not exist in Illinois. The state archives division of the state library, headed by Secretary of State William J. Stratton, exists for the sole purpose of making these records immediately available. Any state official is permitted by law to transfer any of his records, which are of permanent value, to the archives division. The records are filed, indexed, and safeguarded against improper use, alteration, or unauthorized withdrawal from the files. Miss Margaret C. Norton is superintendent of the archives department.

The following are candidates for lieutenant governor of Illinois, subject to the Republican primaries, April 12: Fred E. Sterling, Rockford; Theodore D. Smith, Chicago; Edward C. Longfellow, Chicago; Guy M. Talcott, Chicago; James C. White, Chicago; Lincoln Wisler, Chicago.

Members of the Illinois Press association, who attended the recent Chicago meeting, visited a Century of Progress, Chicago's World's fair 1933, and expressed themselves as being highly impressed with what they saw and heard at the administration building. The inspection tour, which was made at the time the semi-annual meeting of the association was held in Chicago, was in charge of Gerry D. Scott, Wyoming, president, and W. W. Loomis, LaGrange, chairman of the tour committee.

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson has urged early action on the city street improvement work as a means of providing employment for men now idle. According to highway officials, $400,000 of the $40,000,000 road program outlined for 1932 has been allotted for work on city streets traversed by state highways. The projects planned for first consideration were selected on the basis of existing conditions of the pavement, and upon the amount of traffic as determined by the state-wide traffic survey. Legislation in the last general assembly was enacted to authorize this kind of work to be done by the state.

Dr. William J. Davidson, president of Illinois Wesleyan university, Bloomington, since 1922, has resigned, effective September 1, next. Doctor Davidson presented his resignation a year ago but was persuaded by the trustees of the university to reconsider. Doctor Davidson has not announced his future plans.

Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom has ruled that town halls built by general taxation to provide a place for the town meeting, are entirely subject to control by the town meeting.

Cody, Peoria; Walter J. Flens, Chicago; Oscar G. Peterson, Chicago; Charles P. Power, Cantrall; Francis J. Sullivan, Jr., Chicago; Bert C. White, Chicago; Edward J. Wirtz, Maywood.

C. Herrick Hammond, supervising architect in the state department of purchases and construction, has announced that bids for the repairs to be made on the dome and the roof of the state capitol building will be received March 22. The plans call for repairs that will not change the familiar outline of the dome. The present mottled, greenish effect will be changed to a uniform leaden cast. Two hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars has been appropriated for the purpose. The work, when under way, will provide employment for various branches of the building trades, particularly structural steel worker, sheet metal workers, roofers, and painters.

Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom has ruled that fund for township pauper relief should be kept separate from other township funds. It is the opinion of Attorney General Carlstrom that a separate fund will relieve the town from further support when such fund is exhausted.

The Illinois State World's fair commission, headed by Gov. Louis L. Emmerson, met with Rufus Dawes and other officials of a Century of Progress exposition and discussed the state's program for participation. It has been announced that within a short time the executive committee will meet in Chicago to make its recommendation for state exhibits. Among those who attended the meeting were: David E. Shanahan, speaker of the house of representatives, Senator Richey V. Graham, Senator Richard J. Barr, Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg, U. J. Hermann and B. F. Baker.

Edward E. Barrett, Chicago, has been elected president of the University of Illinois trustees. He succeeds George A. Barr, Joliet. Harrison E. Cunningham, Urbana, has been re-elected secretary, and Lloyd Morey, Urbana, has been re-elected comptroller. The executive committee is composed of Edward E. Barrett, George A. Business Opportunities.

According to L. J. Scheve, cashier of the First National bank of Mascoutah, Ill., the industries of that city, with the exception of a few mines, have been able to keep a comparatively steady schedule of production and have retained their employees throughout the winter. Some industries have increased their outputs.

The Owen-Illinois Bottle company, Streator, Ill., has put 420 men to work and it is expected that 100 more will be added to the force in a short time.

Highway jobs in Cook county will furnish employment for about 2,800 men and in addition 7,200 men will be employed in the metropolitan area on the state's program to spend $12,000,000 in that district this year.

The mines at Harrisburg, Ill., shipped 338 cars of coal on March 9, making the largest shipment for any single day this year. Business in general in Saline county is more optimistic than it has been for months.

The Caterpillar Tractor company, Peoria, now has 1,500 men at work as compared with only 500 a year ago. The employees are working on a five-day-week schedule.

During the cold wave, many thousands of miners were at work full time in Illinois. Much additional help was employed by railroads to take care of the heavy coal traffic.

At the time of this writing, the national drive against unemployment has been successful in securing jobs for more than 202,000 workers.

Work has been increased steadily at the Brown shoe factory at Mattoon, Ill. There are 400 persons employed at the factory and the weekly pay roll amounts to $5,000.

The Graff Garment company of Decatur will open a factory in Assumption, Ill., within a short time and will start operations with a force of 75 women and girls. It is expected that this number will be increased shortly after the factory has started.

Road and bridge work in Cook county will begin soon as President Wheelan of the Cook county board has directed that the work start promptly so that 1,200 men may be employed on those projects by the middle of April.

Chairman Cornelius J. Doyle of the Republican State central committee has issued a call for the state convention of that party in the arsenal at Springfield for noon Friday, April 22. Nominations of candidates for presidential electors and of three University of Illinois trustees, selection of delegates-at-large and alternates to the national convention, and adoption of party platform comprise the business to be transacted. Democrats will act on similar matters at their state convention in the house of representatives on the same day.

Lesson for April 3

GOD IN CREATION

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 1:1-5, 26-31. GOLDEN TEXT—In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. PRIMARY TOPIC—In the beginning—God. JUNIOR TOPIC—God the Creator. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Maker of All Things. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—God in Creation.

Genesis, the book from which the lessons of the quarter are taken, as its name indicates, is a book of beginnings. It contains the only reliable information we have of the origin of the heavens and the earth, plant and animal life, human life, human institutions, and human relations. Without it we would be absolutely ignorant as to the origin of these fundamental things. The first chapter of the book from which our lesson is taken is one of the most wonderful in the Bible. Indeed, it is the key to the whole Bible.

I. God (v. 1).

He was before all things. He had no beginning. Everything but God had a beginning. God, the uncaused cause, is the cause of all things. "Before the mountains were brought forth or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God" (Ps. 90:2.)

II. The Origin of the Universe (v. 1).

It was created by God. All things came into being by the will and act of a personal God. The Hebrew word translated "create," according to reliable authority, is the strongest word which the Hebrew language has to express the idea of the origination of substance. The first four words of the Bible exhibit the one fundamental, all-pervasive principle of philosophy of every right life. In the beginning of all science and philosophy—God. In the beginning of every life—God. In the beginning of every year—God. In the beginning of every day—God. In the beginning of every business—God. In the beginning of every human relationship—God. In the beginning of every thought—God.

III. The Degeneration of the Earth (v. 21).

Between verses one and two is a clearly marked interval of perhaps long duration. The earth which was created by God was later overtaken in a cataclysmic judgment. The Hebrew word for "was" might just as well have been translated "became." Instead, therefore, the earth having been created a void or chaos, we see that it became chaos through a judgment. In Isaiah 45:18 the prophet expressly declares that God did not create the earth a waste, but that he formed it to be inhabited.

IV. The Regeneration of the Earth (vv. 3-25).

As previously noted, the second verse of Genesis does not describe the state of the earth when it first came from the Creator's hands, but a changed condition which took place subsequent thereto. The following verses reveal a new effort of creative power by which the earth is again fitted up for the habitation of man. The power active in this reorganization is the Holy Spirit. On the first day the voice of the Almighty was heard saying, "Let there be light," and the darkness was dispelled by the light. In the second day the expanse or firmament was made which separates the waters above the firmament from those below it. The third day dry land appeared clothed with vegetation. The fourth day witnessed the appearance of the lightholders, the sun, moon, and stars. They were not created then, but set free from darkness and ruin. On the fifth day fish and birds were created and on the sixth day cattle, creeping things, beasts of the field, and man.

V. The Origin of Man (vv. 26-31).

He was created by God. This precludes the foolish idea that man ascended from or through the brute. He came into being through a special creative act of God. This image and likeness is not physical or bodily, but intellectual and moral (Eph. 4:24; Col. 3:10). God's likeness is reflected in man's three-fold nature. Man is spirit, soul, and body (1 Thess. 5:23). As there is a trinity and unity in God so there is a trinity in man. Spirit is that part of man by which he has the power to know God. Soul is self-consciousness, the seat of man's emotions and desires. The body is the seat of the senses, enabling man to have world consciousness. God made man to be a personality capable of having fellowship with himself, and with whom he could share his glory.

Song of Peace

The belfries of all Christendom now roll along the unbroken song of peace on earth, good will to men!—Long-fellow.

Paths to Triumph

"God's trials nobly borne in obedience to his righteous will are the paths to victorious triumph."

A Favorable Light

Faith takes in a favorable light even what seems adverse.—Bengel.

FEW FISH ESCAPE PURSUIT OF OTTER

Among all the animals that are good fishermen, there is probably none more capable than the otter. You can often locate him by finding broken shells of shellfish, of which he seems to be especially fond. He leaves the scattered fragments of his meal on the banks of streams and lakes and among the rocks.

The coat of the otter is of brown fur, and it is so valuable that, in order to prevent men from taking it from him, as he prefers to wear it himself, he hides away near secluded lakes or water courses far from any place where men live. He is almost twice the size of the mink, being often 40 inches long, and looks something like a seal when he is partly out of water and his wet fur gleams in the sun.

This clever fisherman is the champion of the fishing veterans who wear fur. No fish is too swift for him. Whereas the mink prefers to take his fishing easily, the otter dives, swims or floats after his prey. He is an expert swimmer and can dart about under the water with wonderful speed, so that no fish has much of a chance when he goes fishing. He always catches his fish.

Another water dweller who sometimes get credit as a fisherman, but lives on a vegetarian diet, is the beaver. The beaver builds his home out in the water and there stores up his winter food. He likes the bark of trees and these he cuts down when they are succulent and tender with the sap. He gathers enough to tide him over the winter time, and lives on his hoard, leaving the fish, strangely enough, strictly alone.

Double Purpose Served in Odd Statue Designs

On a nobleman's estate in Silesia there is a collection of some of the most curious statues in the world. The statues are carved in linden wood and are slightly more than life size. They comprise a considerable number of figures, which include the 12 Apostles, a few saints, peasant women and even a figure representing the former lord of the manor, who is seen with his arm linked through that of a soldier comrade.

All of the statues are hollow and each one of them is a beehive, openings in the backs of the figures providing for the entrance and exits of the honey-gathering insects.

The records of the manor show that the first of the wooden statues was put in place in the year 1600.—Philadelphia Record Sunday Magazine.

Engine Governs Speed

If a man will but build an engine powerful enough there is nothing to keep him from flying at a speed of 1,000 miles a hour, believes Squadron Leader A. H. Orlebar, captain of the Schneider cup team, members of which have already flown in excess of 400 miles an hour. "Flying at high speeds is a perfectly wonderful sensation," he said. "But there really is no big thrill. There is a much bigger thrill in tobogganing or skiing. If somebody will design the engines there is nothing in the human element to prevent airplanes reaching a speed of 1,000 miles an hour."

Up-to-Date Ducks

Mary's mother raised a large flock of wild ducks this year. One windy day they all took to the air. Mary never had seen them on the wing before and ran to her mother, saying, "Oh, look, mother. Our ducks all have airplanes!"

A statesman with his ear to the ground may hear only all footsteps departing.

COLDS

RUB Musterole well into your chest and throat—almost instantly you feel easier. Repeat the Musterole-rub once an hour for five hours... what a glorious relief!

Those good old-fashioned cold remedies—oil of mustard, menthol, camphor—are mixed with other valuable ingredients in Musterole to make it what doctors call a "counter-irritant" because it gets action and is not just a salve.

It penetrates and stimulates blood circulation and helps to draw out infection and pain. Used by millions for 20 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. All druggists.

To Mothers—Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

"Is the world getting better?"
"I think so. People no longer break up your home to get your flat."

She—Well, you don't expect to find them around my neck, do you?

Modern Help

Lady (at employment agency)—Have you your references with you?
Cook—Yes'm! have you?

Stronger than He Was at Twenty

FIFTY-FIVE years old, and still going strong!

Do you want the secret of such vitality? It isn't what you eat, or any tonic you take. It's something anyone can do—something you can start today and see results in a week! All you do is give your vital organs the right stimulant.

A famous doctor discovered the way to stimulate a sluggish system to new energy. It brings fresh vigor to every organ. Being a physician's prescription, it's quite harmless. Tell your druggist you want a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. Get the benefit of its fresh laxative herbs, active senna, and that pure pepsin. Get that lazy liver to work, those stagnant bowels into action. Get rid of waste matter that is slow poison so long as it is permitted to remain in the system.

The new energy men and women feel before one bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin has been used up is proof of how much the system needs this help.

Get a bottle of this delicious syrup and let it end that constant worry about the condition of the bowels. Spare the children those bilious days that make them miserable. Save your household from the use of cathartics which lead to chronic constipation. And guard against auto-intoxication as you grow older.

Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin is such a well known preparation you can get it wherever drugs are sold and it isn't expensive.

An Explanation

To clear up some of the criticism regarding the appointment of judges and clerks of election and jury, the following is submitted:

It is surmised by many that the supervisor has the full authority in these appointments. Briefly the law is as follows:

The supervisor shall be one of the judges of election in his precinct. The other two judges are required to be appointed by the Republican and Democratic committeemen in each precinct. Each committeeman selects one judge, thus not more than two judges can represent any one political party. Each judge of election chooses one clerk of election, who must be qualified, capable, etc. Customarily, in the elections with shorter ballots, the ladies are favored as clerks and the rural representation is considered as well. The judges are verified by the county board and hold from time of appointment in June of each year until June the next year.

Checkers are usually appointed by the committeemen of each precinct and in some instances the candidates themselves hire checkers to keep tabs on those who have and have not voted.

The appointment of judges and clerks for a village election is not in any instance under the jurisdiction of the township supervisor or the county board.

Regarding the jurors, the supervisor of each township prepares a list every two years, verified by the county board. These names are placed in a box, with others from all over the county and before the term of court opens, a drawing is performed by the County Judge and Circuit Clerk and a blindfolded person then draws the names required for that panel. So it does not necessarily mean that when the supervisor places your name on the jury list, that you are going to serve, unless your name is drawn.

The Truth About The Governor's Race

Oscar E. Carlstrom is the only candidate for Governor who has the courage to definitely and positively take a stand on the vital questions of the day. Banker Omer N. Custer is picked by Gov. Emmerson, so that Banker Custer is Mr. Emmerson, under the name of CUSTER.

Did Mr. Emmerson promise Mr. Carlstrom his support for 1932, WHEN MR. CARLSTROM MADE MR. EMMERSON GOVERNOR IN 1928? If he did so promise, why does he select Mr. Custer? Is it because Mr. Custer would carry on FOUR MORE YEARS OF THE EMMERSON ADMINISTRATION?

Mr. Carlstrom has kept and fulfilled all of his promises, whether expressed or implied. Has Mr. Emmerson done so? Now in consideration of the policies announced, the candidates for the Governorship are Mr. Carlstrom, Mr. Emmerson, Banker Small and Banker Malone. We did not include Banker Custer because Mr. CUSTER is MR. EMMERSON.

Mr. Emmerson does not dare come before the people with his past record of inaction, coupled with his broken promise to Mr. Carlstrom, as well as his broken promise to those who elected him. That is why Banker Custer is in the race.

Banker Small is the same Len Small who was so definitely and completely retired by the people in 1928, and is much less desirable and capable at this time, because of his previous record and his advanced age. Banker Malone has not exhibited any traits of conviction, or leadership, that would demand serious consideration of his candidacy.

So that in the final analysis we have one and only one candidate for Governor whom the people can rightly and justly elect, based upon party loyalty, experience, ability and integrity. That candidate is our present Attorney General, Oscar E. Carlstrom, Lawyer, Soldier and Leader.

Let's Nominate

Oscar E. Carlstrom

"I don't believe in bunking the people by promising to do something that no governor can do. Prohibition is a part of the Federal Constitution and is enforced under Federal Law. The governor of a state has no power to nullify the laws of the nation. The place to secure modification, change or repeal is the United States senate and the House of Representatives."

ON TAXATION HE SAYS:

"There is but one great issue in this campaign and that is whether or NOT our government is going to get on a basis of cost that will make it possible for them to exist without confiscating the property of taxpayers. SONG OF THE WEEK
Old Playmate
Folks did not like you, you had fun-ny ways... They used to wonder what I found to praise
Reproduced by permission of the copyright owners.

HERE'S a fresh idea—a new twist on the "Old Gang of Mine" type of song. It has a sweet, appealing melody, climaxing in a vigorous finish. One of the things that struck me when I first heard it was the sensible way its lyric had been handled, its eulogy of a boyhood chum being achieved without approaching the maudlin or mawkish type of sentiment. As far as I know this is the first time a tribute of this sort has found expression in a popular song.

Matt Malneck and Gus Kahn (the old reliable) are the authors. Matt has been associated with Paul Whiteman's orchestra for a long time as violinist and arranger, and is also the composer of "I'm Through with Love." He is a talented boy, and has written several lovely violin concertos in the modern manner. Whiteman has recorded several of these, including the exceedingly popular "Midnite Reflections." Having entered the popular song field with two such hits as "I'm Through with Love" and "Old Playmate," it certainly looks like we can expect a great deal from this versatile musician. As for Gus Kahn—he's one of Tin Pan Alley's most dependable representatives. He's been writing them a long time, and they're always good. I have already sung "Old Playmate" on my Cremo programs, and plan to sing it again. It's a real hit and my "Song of the Week."

New Uniform Designed For 4-H Club Girls

WHEN the boys and girls meet in Washington, D. C., for their Sixth National 4-H Club Camp this June, the girls are going to look very trim and smart, according to Mary Grace Ramey.

The girls' new uniform, which she describes in an article in the April Country Gentleman, is so simple, she says, that any girl can make one herself with little difficulty.

"The dress is made of a green cotton broadcloth with a detachable collar of white," Miss Ramey says in her article. "The tie is white crepe de chine. Pearl buttons fasten the sleeves and the belt has a matching white pearl buckle. The correct length for the skirt is fifteen inches from the floor and the coat is long enough so that it covers the skirt yoke. The frock itself has no sleeves, but it does cover the tops of the arms just a wee bit. It looks prettier this way. The blouse and skirt yoke are in one, and every girl will fit her frock neatly to her individual figure.

"To keep the crisp knife-like edge on the skirt pleats, a row of machine stitching very close to the edge of each pleat will prove an invaluable aid.

"A rather small, soft crusher hat, of white felt, and sports shoes with approved heels, such as our pictured 4-H club girl has on, are the accessories recommended for the 4-H girl delegates to wear with their uniforms."

Bell System Switchboards Link Teletypewriters in Wide Network

Above is shown a new type of switchboard, where teletypewriters are interconnected for the transmission of written information just as telephone calls are switched for voice communication. The operator is making a connection at the switchboard, in response to the call which has just come in on the teletypewriter in front of her. In the oval is a teletypewriter in use.

The recent development of a switchboard to interconnect teletypewriters—machines which send and receive typewritten messages electrically by wire—now makes possible the exchange of written information among subscribers on a nation-wide basis, with the same speed and in much the same way that present telephone switchboards interconnect one telephone user with another for local or long distance conversations anywhere in the Bell System.

Send and Receive at Will

A subscriber who wishes to send a typewritten message to another subscriber to teletypewriter service, wherever located, simply types out on his own machine the call number of the other subscriber. This number appears instantly before the operator at the teletypewriter switchboard, and she establishes, through the switchboard, the connection between the two teletypewriters. Once the two subscribers are connected by wire in this way, they may send and receive typed messages as desired, at the speed of electrical communication and without regard to distance.

Resemble Ordinary Typewriters

Teletypewriters look and are operated like ordinary typewriters. But as each key of one machine is struck, in the course of typing a message, it sends an electrical impulse over the wire which causes the other machine to imprint the same letter. Thus, a message typed on the one machine is also typed on the other simultaneously, and identical copies are produced on both machines. Carbon copies may be made, forms may be filled in, and the machine may be used, in connection with the service, for practically all the other purposes for which an ordinary typewriter is used.

Radio Telephone Speeds Alaskan Salmon Industry

Salmon don't just grow in cans. Above is shown one of the early steps in transforming the silvery horde to a table delicacy for whose enjoyment a can opener is the only implement required. When the salmon canning industry of Alaska wanted a modern and reliable means of communication between plants, and also between plants and vessels of the fishing fleet, the Western Electric Company was invited to show what the radio telephone would do. A type of radio telephone installation developed by Bell Telephone Laboratories for communication between airplanes and ground stations was adapted to the industry's needs, and demonstrated its practicability during seven weeks of test and up to 130 miles between ship and shore.

Custer Takes

Stand On Tax

Burden Question

Omer N. Custer, Republican candidate for Governor, Thursday in a statement issued from his Chicago Headquarters in the Morrison Hotel said that the small home owners in the outlying communities of the Chicago area must be given immediate relief.

"In my opinion tax relief should be given as soon as possible to the small home owner in the outlying districts of Chicago and other communities," said Mr. Custer.

"Hundreds of thousands of persons have worked all their lives toward owning a home. Today many of them are unable to pay their tax bills, because taxes are little short of being overburdened with heavy confiscatory.

"There are 15,000 local taxing bodies in the state. Many of them are overlapping. Consequently, the tax-payers money in many cases is paying two and even more times for the performance of the same service.

"The only adequate solution possible is the revamping of our entire governmental system. This must be applied to the state government and to all local governments as well if we are to have relief that will restore public administration to a state of solvency.

"I grant you this is a tremendous undertaking. It cannot be accomplished all at once. But a beginning can be made now.

"You are NOT going to cure our difficulties by merely cutting down appropriations for public school buildings or by cutting teachers salaries. Our difficulties are deeper than that. We must make a study of the entire problem and then go to work on its solution."

coffee will be served by the following hostess: Mrs. Edith Lambrecht, Mrs. Jerry Lankenau, Mrs. Albert Minger, Mrs. Homer Smith, Mrs. Arthur Geuther, Mrs. Jerry Hosbach, Mrs. Henry Harnack, Mrs. Ferdinand Scheer, Mrs. William Rahm, Mrs. William Genens and Mrs. Edward Warning. Is Your Gasoline Tax Money BUILDING GOOD ROADS OR ENRICHING RACKETEERS?

You pay a tax on every gallon of gasoline you buy. Your state levies this tax to pay for building good roads.

But your state is not getting all the money paid as a gasoline tax. RACKETEERS ARE TAKING AN ALARMING AMOUNT OF IT! They are selling bootlegged gasoline on which they pay the state no tax—but they make motorists pay all or a part of the tax. The racketeer keeps this tax money himself!

You get your tax back in the form of good roads when the state collects the tax. You get nothing when racketeers get your money. And remember—if your state got all the money paid as tax, it could well afford to lower its gasoline tax!

If you want your money to go into road building instead of into the racketeers' pockets, make sure the gasoline you buy is not bootlegged. Buy gasoline made by a reliable, law-abiding company and sold under a dependable, well-known brand name, and be certain that your tax money goes to your state and not to the racketeers. That's the only way to beat the racketeers.

How to Damn an Enemy

A Takudah brought word to Endurance of a strange happening at En traverse lake. He had been fishing there at an inlet for barbuttes, he said—half-asleep that morning, with the fish line tied around his big toe. A thundering sound in the sky had roused him; and looking up, he had beheld a fearful thing come out of the southern horizon and roar out over the lake.

The sight of it, said John Afraid-of-his-Squaw, had nearly tumbled him from his boat. It had lit down on the water, he said, near Goose point. And behold, a few minutes later it rose and started across the lake for the south shore. He had watched it no longer, but scurried to the bank and crawled in among some rocks; for the dreadful thing might have been hungry and questing for food.

Frank Pedneault listened very thoughtfully to the Indian's story, and then began drawing some conclusions of his own. To him this Indian's shiny monster was a possible key to many puzzles. To the best of his recollection he had never yet seen Alan Baker throw down a job merely because it was tough. And he knew that Baker had been heart and soul determined to wipe out that first stinging defeat and save Joyce MacMillan's dad. Bill had intimated that Alan had gone after those bandits; without violating his oath of secrecy, he had dropped a few broad hints to that effect.

Pedneault drew a conclusion: "Alan went out and got himself a flying machine to hunt them men out of the Thal-Azzah or make that Inconnu trip. He and Bill arranged to meet somewhere. He picked Bill up and now they're over there together on the rousing trick in a coon's age!"

As he stood in the barracks door gazing wistfully across the Mackenzie to the distant hills, he felt all deserted by his comrades. "And they left me out in the cold. Didn't tell me one d—d thing about it. To h—l with 'em both! But Lord! I wish—on a trick like that—oh Lord, I wish..."

Not absolutely sure of his conclusions, he started out along the grassy terrace toward Mrs. Drummond's flower garden where Elizabeth Spaulding was reading. He was pondering, in vague outline, a trick of his own. It was a serious matter, and he wanted to be certain of his guess before he cut loose with a scheme like that. Elizabeth no doubt knew all about Alan's plans, since she was waiting here for him to return and marry her. Elizabeth did know the story. Haskell had let her know. Not daring to go to her himself, he had employed Whipple to casually tell her that Baker had stolen valuable government property at Edmonton, had broken several flying regulations, and was certain of arrest and imprisonment the hour he showed up in civilization. No longer a policeman, and having no authorization of any sort, Baker might even be charged with second-degree murder if he killed any of those bandits.

The news affected Elizabeth very little. Superintendent Williamson and Colonel Steele were both good friends of Alan's and both had power in high places. If his venture should be successful, they no doubt could get him clear. There is a lot of virtue, she reflected, in success.

When Pedneault came across and began asking roundabout questions concerning Alan and his venture, Elizabeth told him what she knew. She knew that Pedneault would repeat her words to Alan, if he got the chance; and Alan would thus hear from another person of her steadfast loyalty to him.

Very thoughtful, when he found out his guess had been correct, Pedneault walked back across the terrace to the mission hospital where Larry Younge was propped up in a chair beside a window. For twenty minutes, leaning over the sill, Pedneault conferred with Larry in low tones.

From there, he went over to Haskell's cabin.

Haskell was shaving. He turned around and snapped:

"Well, what is it?"

"Sir, a met called Adolphe brought word of trouble down river in an Indian camp. The Smokies, several families of 'em, have got hold of some 'permits,' and they're quarreling, fighting. I could handle it myself. I've straightened out messes like that. I could be there and back in the launch by mid-afternoon, with your permission."

"You can't go. I need the launch myself in a little while."

Pedneault cleared his throat nervously. "Sir, I know it's not my place to say a thing like this, but—just a mere suggestion, sir—Superintendent Williamson is coming here on the next down-boat, probably tomorrow evening; and he's always very vexed about Indians killing each other in drunken brawls. He's always pleased when we nail a camp like that, sir."

It was a consummate stroke, his reference to Williamson. Larry Younge had prompted him to that.

Haskell took thought. If he sent a man and smoothed out this Indian trouble, it would look very well in a report. It would be a positive action, an achievement. He said: "All right. Go down and reduce them to order. But be back here in three hours. I want that launch—"

Pedneault was already on his way up to barracks for rifle, belt-gun and keys from Whipple. Down at the wharf, he hurriedly tanked up on gas and put in a big drum extra. Jumping in, slipping into the wheel seat, he stuck a pipe between his teeth, jammed his hat low over his eyes, yanked the starter chain and swung out upon the broad river.

A little puzzled by these preparations and all this haste, Haskell stepped outside his cabin. As he stood there, watching Pedneault's demoniac driving, watching the scarlet-and-gold launch vanish in its own spray down the Mackenzie, he heard a feeble shout up the terrace behind him; and he turned and looked at the hospital.

At that moment Larry Younge, leaning forward in his padded chair, was shaking a fist out the window and emitting a weak—

"Yee-oww! Three whoops for Ped!"

It was Haskell's intention, as soon as Pedneault came back with the launch, to take Whipple and make a trip up the Big Aloooska. Baker would probably use the MacMillan trading post as a maneuvering base against the bandits. By muffling the motor over the last few miles the launch could slip up quietly. They would not be expecting him to strike a second blow; they likely would be up at the trading store; and at best it would take them ten full minutes to rise out of the narrow cramped river.

But as he sat there in his cabin, planning this blow, Haskell doubted if he was to succeed. A kind of fatalism had laid hold of him. In his feud with Baker he had been successful in the main, but what did all his triumph mean, when he had lost Elizabeth Spaulding? His victory had been a barren one. He saw that she was going to marry Alan Baker. In these last weeks the prophetic knowledge of that marriage had been a waking nightmare. Day by day it was marching closer and he was powerless to halt it.

When four hours passed and Pedneault failed to return with the launch, Haskell began to get suspicious. Five hours, six—and Pedneault still absent. Haskell finally went across to the hospital and demanded of Larry Younge:

"What were you and Pedneault talking about before he came to my cabin?"

Larry never smiled. "I don't exactly mind, but I think we were talking about the weather. Ped said he hoped it ain't going to rain any more."

Haskell snarled: "You're laughing in my face. You hatched some deviltry with him." He threatened viciously: "I'll fix you, constable. You're to be invalidated out of service. I've got something to say about the terms. When you're hobbling around, trying to live on a few dollars a month, you won't be quite so d—d chipper!"

In a seething fury he turned away. Pedneault had tricked him, stolen the launch, and joined Baker's venture!

Unable now to go up the Aloooska and smash that plane, he found outlet for his bitterness in avenging plans, vengeance against Alan Baker and those men. At Williamson's coming visit he could deal them some terrible blows. His enemies had played into his very hands. Baker had bought out under suspicious circumstances, had made a criminal of himself, had taken the law into his own hands and turned justice to private ends! Pedneault had given a false report and absconded with police property. Bill Hardsock had stolen supplies and subverted them to his own uses, had gone a. w. o. l., had aided in a criminal enterprise, and to crown it all, had deserted.

Knowing Williamson's foibles pretty well, Haskell foresaw the superintendent's anger when he learned those blunt facts. They violated every tene in the stern old officer's code, for he was a stickler for discipline. He would soak Hardsock and Pedneault to the limit. He would turn thumbs down on any leniency toward Baker. The ex-sergeant would be branded with disgrace, if he escaped the pen. And if he did get those bandits, he had awaiting him the news that Trader MacMillan, whose innocence he had championed, for whose sake he had done all this and whose vindication had been his great purpose—that Dave MacMillan, broken by shame and bitterness, was lying dead, a suicide, at Resolution.

Haskell saw that his only real difficulty lay in overcoming Williamson's earlier prejudice and winning his personal liking. That called for shrewd psychology, but on that point he knew he could make Alan Baker look like a stammering farm boy.

The next evening, when Williamson arrived, Haskell first of all took him on an inspection tour of the post. Finished with that, they stopped and talked together on the slope, a little distance from the barracks. A respectful distance behind them Corporal Whipple waited, note paper in hand, ready to scrape and salute if they glanced his way or asked for any figures.

Haskell was elated, he was secretly exultant, at his success so far in "working" his superior officer. Williamson was openly pleased with the inspection. Barracks, cabins, dog teams, canoes, guns—everything was in capital shape.

This auspicious beginning was all well enough, Haskell felt, but his trouble with Baker was the all-crucial thing. It was going to make or break him. The whole outcome depended on Williamson; depended on whether the division commander would believe his story or Baker's. As yet he did not know what Williamson thought. The superintendent had heard a few of the bare facts on his way down the Mackenzie, but he had left headquarters before Baker's buying-out papers had reached there for his signature.

Haskell decided that the old officer had been favorably prepared for the story now; and he led into it gradually, shrewdly. Starting with the Midnight Sun robbery, he gave a detailed account of this last month, down to the hour when Pedneault stole the launch and joined Baker's venture.

"What hurts me the worst, sir," he added, with a consummate show of real sorrow, "is the refusal of these men to co-operate with me or let me help them. Maybe I'm at fault; I don't know. But by way of example, sir, if Corporal Hardsock had told me about needing gas and oil, he could have had every drop! at the post. But he wouldn't tell me; he st— I mean, he took it. An Indian brought me word about him waiting at En Traverse lake for Baker. I figured Baker might need extra supplies or help, so with Whipple I went down there right away. We tried desperately to get in connection with Baker. Even shot signals for him to wait. But he scorned our offer."

"When I got back here," Haskell went on, "I planned to go up the Aloooska and take him supplies. I wanted to put everything I had at his disposal. He's the best man-hunter in the country, and I felt he would get those criminals if anybody could. I didn't give a d—n—if you'll pardon me, sir—about him being so hostile to me personally. All I cared about was to help him run down those bandits. If they escape, it will be a blot on the splendid record here at Endurance. But, as I explained, Pedneault told me a lie about some trouble at an Indian camp, and ran off with the launch."

As he watched his superior's reactions, Haskell smiled to himself. His generous praise of an enemy was having its calculated effect. He was doubly damning Baker by praising him. He was gaining Williamson's sympathy, his approbation. He had beaten down the old officer's former prejudice against him, and had instilled a subtle hostility against Baker and the two deserters.

For moments afterwards Williamson made no comment. Surprised and alarmed at discovering this bad blood here at an important post, the old officer gazed silently down upon the purpling river.

Authorities Made Poor Guess, in This Instance

The hundredth anniversary of the death of Bolivar, the great liberator of South America from Spanish rule, uncovered a number of amusing yarns concerning this famous character.

The story goes that on one occasion Bolivar sent a messenger ahead to a small town where he and his party were to spend the night. In it the liberator directed the town authorities to have food and quarters ready for his men and horses and added that there should be for himself shelter, food, etc., etc., etc.

The town authorities promptly got everything ready except the three etc's, which troubled them considerably. "What," they asked, "did the great liberator mean?"

Finally one of them, aware of Bol-ivar's reputation with the ladies, decided he had solved the problem.

It happened, however, that he was wrong and three of the town's prettiest girls were sent home at the direction of the highly amused Bolivar.—Los Angeles Times.

Memory Came Back

La Fontaine, having attended the funeral of a friend, absent-mindedly went to call upon him a short time afterward.

"Dead? Impossible?" he exclaimed on hearing the sad news; then recollecting himself, he patted the servant's arm.

"True enough," he said. "I was there."—Golden Book Magazine.

Orchardists Seek Eight Cost Cuts

Hope for 1932 Held Out to Fruit Growers of Illinois.

An eight-point program designed to help orchardists cut their production costs and get at least a small margin of profit in 1932 is being pushed throughout the state by the extension service of the Illinois College of Agriculture, University of Illinois. Thirty county schools are being held to acquaint fruit growers with the eight points.

They are: (1) Economical spraying; (2) tree thinning and culling; (3) gross pruning instead of detail pruning wherever possible; (4) less cultivation; (5) use of more horse power and less tractor power; (6) quantity buying of materials; (7) revaluation of investment to lessen overhead expense, and (8) repair, rather than replace machinery.

Many Illinois orchards are planted too close, which makes the work in them expensive, according to R. S. Marsh, horticultural extension specialist of the college. Hence, the most timely thing that orchardists can do is the tree thinning and culling. Culling out unprofitable varieties or poorly located trees is just as necessary as removing the non-layers from a poultry flock or the low-producing cows from the dairy herd.

"Trees are now living longer and developing larger tops as a result of better spraying methods and increased use of fertilizers. Hence, they should have more space and should not crowd each other. Where trees are planted on the square system, alternate diagonal rows can be removed with profit where they are too thick. A 20-by-20-foot orchard would be 28 by 28, after diagonal rows were removed, or a 30-by-30 orchard would be 42 by 42. Some new peach orchards are now planted 28 by 28, and the recommendation for apple trees has been 40 by 40 for the past 20 years."

"Several Illinois orchardists this year are thinning and culling trees, since last year's fruit prices and this year's prospects make it an easier job when market prices are higher. Although this recommendation will reduce the acre yield temporarily, it will increase the yield for each man-hour, which is more economical at the present time."

Bindweed Always One of Hardest to Exterminate

The perennial bindweed is one of the most persistent weeds, and it is very difficult to kill. If one attempts to kill it by hoeing every time it shows above ground one is usually tired doing this before the weed is killed. Sodium chloride, however, works down into the plant, and will, no doubt, lengthen the period of new growths above ground. Thus, it will weaken, sooner, and, if one sprays just as soon as it appears each time, one should be able to exterminate it. You might start with about four ounces of sodium chloride to a gallon of water, and spray this over about one hundred square feet of ground, thoroughly saturating the leaves. If you find this does not kill the leaves increase the strength until they are killed. While we have not heard of this weed being eradicated, altogether by spraying, it is worth trying. Potatoes could not grow so long as the spraying was continued.—Montreal Herald.

Terracing Made Easy

Terracing is such a simple, easy job that no farmer can afford to let his top soil wash away. Charles F. Holder, Grayson county, Texas, had lost most of the top strata of soil on one 15-acre field. There were ditches difficult to cross and others that could not be crossed. Fertilizer washed away before crops had an opportunity to utilize it. Mr. Holder decided to terrace. With a steel ditcher and four mules, he and a young son in five days built a series of four terraces totaling nearly a mile in length. The ditches no longer interfere, washing has been stopped and fertilizer remains on the field to be utilized by crops.—Capper's Farmer.

Live Stock on Feed

Cattle feeding in the corn belt states is 5 per cent less than a year ago, but 8 per cent greater in the states east of the Mississippi river. Nebraska has 20 per cent less cattle on feed than a year ago, while the feed lots of the western states show a decrease of 17 per cent.

There were 14 per cent more sheep on feed in the whole United States than a year ago. The corn belt states have a marked increase in sheep feeding and the western states also show a gain. Nebraska is feeding 800,000 head of sheep this year.—Nebraska Farmer.

Alfalfa

Alfalfa needs more lime than any other common forage crop. All soils in the East except those of limestone origin need lime for alfalfa, and even limestone soils, such as those in the Shenandoah valley, are often acid at the surface and need lime. The form of lime makes little difference provided it supplies enough calcium oxide. Soils that have not previously been limed will usually require at least one ton of burned lime or its equivalent to the acre.

The Man Who "Brings 'Em Back Alive"

Frank Buck Holding a Tiger Cub

Frank Buck "at His Most Civilized"

Frank Buck With a Baby Tapir

Frank Buck and "Baby Boo"

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

IF, a few years ago, a certain mother down in Texas had been more successful in performing the ceremony of "laying on of hands"—a ceremony familiar to innumerable mothers of innumerable active, venturesome little boys—then thousands of visitors to certain zoological parks in various parts of the United States would never have had the thrill of looking upon the only authentic man-eating tiger ever brought to this country, the biggest king cobra ever captured alive, two of the exceedingly rare Indian rhinoceroses and the finest baby elephant (just two feet and ten inches at the shoulder) ever brought across the seas.

But lest that statement appear to be too paradoxical let it be explained at once that she was the mother of Frank H. Buck, who as a collector of live animals, reptiles and birds, is without a peer in the world today. She had discovered her young son busily engaged in the capture of a big, angry, buzzing rattlesnake near the Buck home on the outskirts of Dallas, Texas, and the "laying on of hands" ceremony was observed forthwith to convince him that there were less dangerous ways for a lad of his years to earn money. (He was collecting rattlesnakes because an old doctor in Minneapolis, Minn., who manufactured a "magic snake oil," was in the market for the reptiles).

Frank Buck will tell you that the ceremony was performed in a most thoroughgoing fashion. But it failed of its purpose. For from his earliest childhood wild animals and birds fascinated him and the desire to possess them was his mastering passion. So the mother who tried to shape the destiny of the foremost exponent of the art of "bringing 'em back alive" was due to be foiled from the beginning.

When the Buck family moved to Chicago, the boy, no longer able to capture small wild animals and birds as he had done on his native soil, haunted the Lincoln Park zoo and the pet stores in the big city, feasting his eyes on strange new animals and birds from far-off corners of the earth. What money he was able to save he invested in owning some of these birds—paying for one pair, incidentally, a price ten times as great as he himself could charge when years later he became a collector.

When he grew older Frank Buck's hobby took him to South America in search of rare birds. This was followed by a second trip to the southern continent and when he sold his collection of live birds he found the deal so profitable that he resolved to go in for wholesale bird and animal collecting. And that was the beginning of a unique career.

Today Frank Buck can go into almost any zoo in the United States or walk through the menagerie tent of any circus and, looking through the bars of the cages, greet the inhabitant thereof as an old friend. For it was he who brought that inhabitant from his native haunts to this place so that the thousands of Americans who have before only heard of the existence of some strange animal can see the animal in the flesh.

Obviously a man with such a record has had more than his share of thrills and narrow escapes from death. Obviously, too, an account of them could not be told within the space of this article any more than a full account of them could be told in the book "Bring 'Em Back Alive," written by Frank Buck with Edward Anthony and published by Simon and Schuster. But there was space in that book to tell of the time Frank Buck found himself sliding into a pit with a man-eating tiger which he and his helpers were trying to get out of the pit into a cage; of the time one of his leopards escaped aboard ship and how he went into a cabin where the leopard was at bay and roped him; and of the time when a king cobra escaped from its cage and cornered him in a hut in his compound at Singapore.

Those are only three of the times when Frank Buck stared death straight in the eyes. There were many others. Perhaps the strangest of all of them was the time a tapir, ordinarily the meekest of all animals, tried to crush him to death with its six hundred pounds of weight and all but succeeded. Then there was the time when an orang-utan, the giant jungle-man of Malaya, was just ready to draw him into a death embrace with his powerful arms and then tear him to pieces with his teeth. There was just one chance to escape alive and Frank Buck took it. He's not a professional boxer, but when the orang came at him with outspread arms, Buck simply walked in and gave the jungle-man an uppercut on the point of the jaw that was as an effective k. o. as was ever demonstrated in the prize ring.

"Yes, I have had more than my share of thrills," Frank Buck will tell you. "But I am frank to say that these close calls do not represent a love of looking death in the eye. I am not that kind of adventurer. I take no unnecessary risks. When a man operates on as big a scale as I do he doesn't have to look for trouble. No matter how careful one is, something is bound to go wrong when live animals and reptiles are handled wholesale. It is then that experience counts."

And he might add that experience counts in other times than when something goes wrong and an adventurer such as he is looks death in the eye. A big game hunter has to think of saving only one life—his own. But a man who collects wild animals, as Frank Buck does, has to think of saving his own life and the animal's too. For the biggest king cobra, a giant orang-utan, an Indian rhinoceros, or a man-eating tiger is utterly valueless to a zoo or a circus if it is dead.

Experience counts, too, in keeping the animal alive after it has been captured. It may seem strange to call Frank Buck a dietitian. But that's exactly what he is and he is an expert in matters of diet to the most finicky epicures in the world. He can't guess how to accustom a wild animal to the change from the food which it eats in its wild state over to "civilized fare." He has to know! The capture of some rare wild animal may represent a great outlay of money and time, plus the ever-present element of danger to the collector. But if, after the beast is captured, its captor doesn't know how to keep it healthy, both physically and mentally, the whole investment of time and money and the potential value of the animal when it is delivered to the zoo or circus may be an entire loss.

Typical of some of the dietetic problems which Frank Buck has had to solve was the case of Baby Boo, the two-foot-ten-inch elephant which he brought back on one of his trips. So far as is known there has never been written any book on "The Care and Feeding of Infant Elephants." So when Frank Buck bought one from a party of Batiks in Sumatra and it was delivered to him in a half-starved, weak and wobbling condition there were no precedents for him to go by in determining what to do to keep from having a dead baby elephant on his hands. Here is what happened, as he tells it:

"My problem had just begun. I had to get some food into that elephant's belly—and without much loss of time. I sent Ali (his native assistant) out to scout around for a milk-goat. He brought one back and hurriedly milked it. I tried to pour some milk down the stubborn pachyderm's throat but I couldn't get her jaws open. Once or twice I managed to get them partly open but before I could pour the milk down she closed them again.

"I considered five or six different plans for feeding that animal, dismissing them as impractical as fast as they popped into my head. Then I got an idea that I thought was worth trying. The first step was to send Ali to a nearby clump to cut me a length of bamboo. As is commonly known, a stick of bamboo is made up of a series of joints, the wood being hollow between joints. Ali brought back exactly what I had sent him for, a piece of bamboo about two inches in diameter. I cut off a piece about nine inches long, leaving the joint to form the bottom. This gave me a device which I planned to use as a feeding tube. I sharpened the opening till it came to a point, and, satisfied that I was on the right track, I proceeded with the next step.

"Before this could be carried out we had to get our elephant (we practically carried her) to the shack where we had arranged to spend the night. I instructed Ali to boil some rice in water. When the rice was cooked, I mixed some goat's milk with it, the result being a thin but nutritious gruel. Then I proceeded to fill my bamboo with this substance.

"This done, Ali got his shoulder right under the elephant's forequarters till she was almost standing on her back legs. Then I forced the point of the bamboo tube between her tightly closed jaws, gradually working it in until I could tip it up and dump the contents down her throat. Stubborn to the last, she tried to keep from swallowing, giving in after a few seconds and the operation was repeated, this time the task proving less difficult. In all, I fed her three tubes of gruel that session.

"An hour later I put the obstinate little girl to bed, covering her up with some old gunny sacks. The following morning there was a definite improvement in her condition, some of the wobbliness having disappeared. We gave her her breakfast, repeating the performance with the tube. This time it was unnecessary to prop her up.

"A little later in the morning we put her on a bullock cart and took her back to Domji, from where she was transported, along with my other specimens to Singapore. We had no trouble feeding her en route, the bamboo feeding tube working perfectly."

One other item which a wild animal collector needs to have in his psychological equipment for following his profession is diplomacy. That Frank Buck has that is shown by the fact that some of his rarest specimens have been obtained because of his friendship with oriental potentates and his skill in handling the native peoples of the jungles where he has had to go to find his animals. Among these people Frank Buck is a great "tuan" (chief) and he is that so coolies in the Malay peninsula and to Indian rajahs. If he hadn't been he would never have been permitted to penetrate the forbidden jungles of Nepal, which is closed to white men, and bring back with him those two Indian rhinos which now have their homes in the New York and Philadelphia zoos.

If he hadn't been, it is doubtful if he would have been able to make the remarkable moving pictures which resulted from his last trip to the Orient. For it was a faithful coolie who came speeding to tell his "tuan" that a python was lying near a trail used by a tiger and that resulted in an epochal film record of a python-tiger fight, the like of which few white men have ever seen and none has ever before photographed.

For to cap his career of "bringing 'em back alive" Frank Buck has lately brought back a movie record of life in the jungle, which is as unique as the record of his career as a collector of wild animals. He also has brought back the memory of one of his narrowest escapes from death—the memory of being stalked by a tiger, of tripping and falling backward when the big cat hurled itself at him and of looking up and seeing the striped belly of the animal passing over him. "Yes, it was a rather close call," said Frank Buck in telling me of this incident. "But—well, you see me here, don't you?"

When You CAN'T QUIT

Fatigue is the signal to rest. Obey it if you can. When you can't, keep cool and carry-on in comfort.

Bayer Aspirin was meant for just such times, for it insures your comfort. Freedom from those pains that nag at nerves and wear you down. One tablet will block that threatening headache while it is still just a threat. Take two or three tablets when you've caught a cold, and that's usually the end of it.

Carry Bayer Aspirin when you travel. Have some at home and keep some at the office. Like an efficient secretary, it will often "save the day" and spare you many uncomfortable, unproductive hours. Perfectly harmless, so keep it handy, keep it in mind, and use it. No man of affairs can afford to ignore the score and more of uses explained in the proven directions. From a grumbling tooth to those rheumatic pains which seem almost to bend the bones, Bayer Aspirin is ready with its quick relief—and always works. Neuralgia. Neuritis. Any nagging, needless pain.

Shooting Merely a Bluff
Some Latin-American countries resort to revolutions as a simple form of election and regard it as the best method for making a political change. Charles H. Cunningham, former United States commercial attaché at Lima, Peru, said at St. Louis recently, "There is a lot of blank shooting done in some of the revolutions, with shots being fired mainly for effect," Cunningham said. "During some of the revolutions in Peru foreigners were allowed to transact business as usual in down town districts, but were warned to keep off of certain streets where fighting was going on.

Store With a History

One of the oldest stores in Philadelphia is this year celebrating its one hundred and eighty-first anniversary. It is a little gunsmith shop and was first opened for business in 1751. The site was originally sold by William Penn in 1684 and William Drinker erected a building in which the first white child born in the Quaker colony was born.

Automobiles Are Barred

The presence of automobiles in the vicinity of the transatlantic radio telephone stations interferes with the delicate instruments and makes reception difficult, so that all automobiles are banned from the grounds and deliveries are made by horse-drawn vehicles. This applies to all cars except those connected with the station, which are shielded in such a way as to prevent this interference.

Midlothian Breaks

Into Limeligh

Midlothian broke into the limelight this week when a big water war broke out when water users were deprived of water on account of non-payment of water dues.
 Armed resistance resulted when attempts were made to shut off the water. The fight was to be aired in court in Chicago the latter part of this week.

Weak Humanity

It is as difficult to get a man to admit that he snores as it is to get a
